All About Food, Fifth Edition

January 8, 2015 - Ontario Agri-Food Education Inc. (OAFE) and Agriculture in the Classroom (AITC) Canada recently launched the fifth edition of the popular educational resource All About Food: Exploring Canada's Food System; allaboutfood.aitc.ca -a companion website that supports high school curriculum across Canada- also comes with the publication. Its purpose is to assisting teachers and students in learning about one of our country's largest industries.

With generous funding and support from CropLife Canada, All About Food explores Canadian food production from farm to fork; it highlights topics and issues related to production, food safety, healthy eating, the environment, as well as technology and trade. The new, interactive website provides an opportunity to investigate the Canadian agri-food system in greater depth with articles, videos and critical thinking questions, and also features career connections throughout the resource.

Available in both English and French, copies of All About Food can be ordered or downloaded from OAFE at www.oafe.org, or from provincial Agriculture in the Classroom organizations at www.aitc.ca.
